OVERVIEW

Jake E. Marcus was born and raised in the Boston, Massachusetts area. Jake has experience in litigation defense and is licensed to practice law in Florida and Massachusetts, as well as the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida.

Jake is a graduate of Stonehill College, where he earned a Bachelor's degree in Finance. Jake then attended the University of Miami School of Law, graduating cum laude in 2017. He also received his Master's of Business Administration at the University of Miami in 2016. During his tenure at the University of Miami School of Law, Jake was a member of the Society of Bar and Gavel and an Intern in the school's Investor Rights Clinic. In addition, he served as Articles and Comments Editor and Executive Editor for the Inter-American Law Review. Jake co-authored a Student Note, "Major League Baseball and the Cuban Influence: The Baseball Coalition Committee", which was published in the Journal's 47th volume. Jake also co-authored a two-part Article series related to College and High School student-athletes' rights to compensation per Name, Image & Likeness ("NIL") developments.

During graduate school, Jake gained experience serving as a legal intern for the United States Securities and Exchange Commission. He also served as an intern for a legal services firm, a legal intern at an in-house counsel position, and a judicial intern at the Boston Housing Court. Prior to law school, Mr. Marcus worked at an investment firm.
